Council 28
AFSCME
THE WASHINGTON FEDERATION OF STATE EMPLOYEES

Jay Inslee for Governor

A staunch advocate for unions and the rights of working people.

He led the fight for an increased minimum wage, real climate change initiatives, and protecting the rights of every Washingtonian. His response to COVID was immediate, and we are seeing the results of the work done early on; Inslee is the proven leader we need in a time of upheaval and crisis.

Gael Tarleton for Secretary of State

A big supporter of labor and workers' rights. She is familiar with security risks and how to fix/mitigate them due to her decade working in the Pentagon and her work as Seattle Port Commissioner. She's focused on updating our election technology, making our elections secure, utilizing both local and federal resources, in-depth voter education, stronger contribution regulations, and overall increased accessibility.

Beth Doglio for 10th Congressional Seat

Advocating for working people her entire career. She'll be a strong ally for all working people in Congress and will fight for a higher minimum wage and stronger pro-labor laws. She has focused most her career on climate change and women's rights and has advocated for progressive change in these arenas for over 30 years. 100% AFSCME voting record.

Kim Schrier for 8th Congressional Seat

Speaks up for affordable healthcare, including prescription and accessible preventive care. Dr. Schrier, a pediatrician, is the only female doctor in Congress. She takes climate change seriously and understands that it's not just about heat and fires, but also the water we drink and the air we breathe. 100% AFSCME voting record.

Carolyn Long for 3rd Congressional Seat

A champion for workers' rights, affordable healthcare, student loan reform, equal pay and climate protection. Long was able to pay for college with her union (UFCW) job at Safeway. She's an educator at the WSU political department and has taught public policy. She has written two books about constitutional law.

No workforce has more at stake in the decisions made by elected officials.

These candidates were carefully interviewed by a panel of fellow WFSE members. We recommend these candidates because they stand strong on public employee issues.
